British Control Troubled Areas

Adopt Vigorous Measures To Stop Racial Rioting

Scattered Incidents Only
Mark of Recent Bitter Struggle.

JERUSLAEM IS QUIET

Only Trouble Now Is In Remote Sections of Palestine.

(By the Associated Press.)
Except for sporadic incidents Jerusalem is quiet today as the steadily increasing British forces took vigorous measures to get the situation in hand.

British troops occupied most of the southern Jewish colony but there are still reports of grave conditions in northern Palestine where an advance of Bedouins from trans-Jordan is rumored.
Possible spread of the Moslem disorders into Syria was being closely watched but so far no overt act of any consequence has been reported.

There was an orderly mass meeting of Moslems and Christians in Beirut, the manifestants evincing no anti-government sentiment.

In Damascus, various scuffles were reported between local police and a group of Arabs, but no report has been received of a spread of the trouble.

In New York city tonight a mass-meeting of thousands of men and women of the Jewish faith in eastern cities will be held, a memorial gathering for Americans who were killed in Palestine and to protest against attacks on Jews by the Arabs.

Patronage Committee To Hear New Evidence

WASHINGTON, August 22.— (AP)—The senate patronage investigating committee was called today by chairman Brookhart to reconvene Monday to consider additional evidence touching conditions in southern states.

Tennessee Pays Tribute To Tyson

Remains Will Rest In Old Cemetery With State's Best Loved.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 28.—
(AP)—The green mounds of Old Gray cemetery here, where rest some of Tennessee's best loved sons, were ready today to share their silence when another grave is dug—the body of Senator Tyson awaiting burial this afternoon.

Senator Tyson's body rests in his home here. There was no public viewing of the remains, the casket remaining closed after leaving Philadelphia and arriving yesterday with Mrs. Tyson and her daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Gilhin, accompanied by IL.

While soldiers who served with Senator Tyson in the Spanish-American and World wars prepared for the semi-military services, six senators who accompanied the body from Washington and state notables, including Governor Horton, awaited the hour of the burial.

Texarkana Negroes Quit Farm When "Sperrits" and "Hants" Come Through

TEXARKANA, Aug. 28.—(AP)— J. Q. McHaffey, prominent Texarkana attorney and operator of a large farm near here had little to say when one or two of his negro employees decided to quit working, but he had much to say and how to do when all of them decided they would leave.

After learning the negroes were about to leave the farm, McHaffey made an investigation and heard wild stories of ghosts, "hants," buried treasures and tales of spooks.

According to the stories, Garbriel Tucker, direct descendant of the negro who inhabited the east coast of Africa, owned the Mc-

McRae Steadily Improv- ing Physicians Report

Sheriff Dorsey McRae, operated on Monday afternoon at a local hospital, is steadily improving, according to announcement from the hospital this morning. He is practically free of fever, had a good night, and attendants are hopeful that the improvement now so marked will continue.

According to physicians, the popular peace officer has shown vitality to a marked degree—greater than they had thought, and at noon today report themselves as entirely satisfied with the progress their patient is making.
Which is good news to a host of friends of this popular county officer throughout southwest Arkansas.

Amity Youth Is Suicide Victim

Kills Self With Rifle After Is Accused of Stealing Money.

AMITY, Ark., Aug. 28.—(AP)— Members of the family of Ezra Jackson, 19, of Kirby, near here, found his lifeless body on Highway 70, near his home late yesterday, a few minutes after he had told them he was going to kill himself. He had shot himself through the heart with a small caliber rifle.

Jackson had recently been accused of the theft of $100 from a traveling salesman who had spent the night at the Jackson home. The formal charge had ever been filed against him, but members of the family say the charge preyed upon his mind and was the cause of his act. He was married only last Saturday.

Pension Checks Ready By First

State Auditor Will Mail
So Be Ready By First of Month.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 28.—(AP)— State Auditor Humphrey announced today that pensions to Confederate soldiers and others entitled to them would be mailed tomorrow so as to be ready for distribution on September.

There are approximately 5750 persons in the state drawing pension, though this number is expected to be reduced through the purging of the rolls.

Wind Wrecks Gin In Searcy Area

One Injured As Wind-storm Hits In Vicinity of Pangburn.

SEARCY, Ark., Aug. 28.—(AP)— A windstorm struck in the vicinity of Pangburn, 5 miles northwest of here, late yesterday, causing property damage estimated at $2,000 and injuring one man, Hardy Hammock.

A gin, in which several men, including Hammock had taken refuge from the storm was blown down, all except Hammock escaping injury.

Where Americans Were Killed in Palestine Rioting

These pictures show scenes in Palestine where rioting between Arabs and Jews resulted in loss of American lives. Twelve young American students were reported to have been killed. At left is a view of Jerusalem. At right, above, is the "Wailing Wall of the Jews" at Jerusalem, which figures largely in the present outbreak. Below is a street scene in Tel Aviv, where bloody skirmishes were frequent and several American casualties were reported.

State Tourists Head Homeward

Turn South After Making Tour of Industrial Heart of Nation.

By GROVER A. ZINN
Special Correspondent Hope Star
EN ROUTE FROM TORONTO.
Aboard South Arkansas Industrial Special, Aug. 28.—It was at the great Canadian National fair at Toronto, key city of the vast farming district of the Canadian Great Lakes region that the South Arkansas tourists gleaned their soundest benefits of the trip from an agricultural standpoint.

Farmers and planters from Dixie and bankers and merchants and manufacturers and other business men from the land of sunshine who depended upon the products of the soil for their livelihood, found keen interest in the exhibition, although climatic conditions of necessity make a Canadian fair far from the agricultural shows the folks of Dixie are used to seeing.

Instead of the products of the Southland, there were those of the great wheat, cattle and corn region a thousand miles to the north.

Hydro-Electric Plant

The tourists, no matter whether his mission be pleasure or information, can seldom turn down a chance to spend any spare time he may have at Niagara Falls, once his head is turned in that direction. Here, where to the deafening roar of billions of gallons of water pouring over the rocky precipice one of the greatest hydro-electric plants in the world has been developed, the sight-seeing student party spent their Sunday. Hardly members of the company ventured forth into the vaporous "caves of the winds" or rode the aerial trolley across the gorge over tumbling waters, more timid ones took the scenic railway tour around the falls and down the river. Not a few women of the party ventured forth in search of souvenirs, while others with steady nerves and with a desire to get first hand information about the noted wonder spot, joined their masculine companions in the thrilling tours.

Half-Million H. P.

Apart from the sight-seeing tours, a group of those interested in the operation of the power plants visited the one on the American side, which is said to produce a half million horse power. Recent additions have been added to the plant, which is located but a few blocks from the business section of the city of Niagara Falls, N. Y. The water, after being turned into a 30-foot sluiceway a mile up the river from the falls, drops approximately 165 feet and flows through the monster turbines that send electric power into lines extending into hundreds of industrial plants in this section.
There are two large hydro-electric plants across the river on the Canadian side. Among those visiting the American plant were A. C.
Neal of El Dorado and A. G. Whit-den of Pine Bluff, both officials of the Arkansas Power & Light company; Fletcher Chemault of the Arkansas Gazette; your correspondent; and others.

Only a short stop was made in Detroit last Saturday, but the trip-per will pay a visit to the Ford automobile plant on the return trip.

It May Be Other Places But Not In Hope, Anyhow

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(AP)— Another great American institution—the bald headed row—is passing, not, as speakers at the National Association of Cosmeticians and Hair Artists convention were careful to note, because of any declining interest in comely choristers, but rather because bald heads themselves are going out of fashion.

The association was told by Miss Georgia D. George, of Los Angeles, that the number of bald headed men is getting smaller each year. She doesn't believe there will be any at all by 1950.

She pool-pooled the tradition that brain work brings on baldness. Its cause, she said, is laziness and neglect. When men learn to use their head, they will have something on it, she said.

Oil Tanker Fire Is Under Control

Fire Swept.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(AP)— Fire which broke out in the fire room of the tanker Paulsboro late night was under control this morning, with the American tanker Beacon (Ill) standing by the Cacum Oil Company reported.

The Paulsboro carried a cargo of 10,000 tons of crude oil, bound from Houston, Texas, to Bayonne,

Italy To Take Part In Schneider Race

Colonel Goes On With
"High Hats" for Aerial Acrobatics.

ROME, August 28.—(AP)—Italy, after having requested England to postpone the Schneider cup races from September 7 because of the death of one of her best fliers, will definitely take part in the Blue Ribbon air races it was announced by under secretary of aviation Balboa today.

General Balboa, in the face of reports that Italy would not enter the races because England refused her request for postponement declared that Italy would enter "as a gesture of good sportsmanship and to give the lie to the statement that Italy would withdraw from the races until next year."

Attack On Ouachita
Forest Brings Kick
From Members.

TEXARKANA, Aug. 28.—Tex-arkana Kiwanians will ask the national organization to demand an article be printed in the Kiwanis Magazine to offset a recent article "highly detrimental to the plan" of establishing Ouachita National Forest as a national park which appeared in the magazine.

The local Kiwanis, club has passed a resolution to be presented before the district organization at its meeting at Tulsa, Okla., September 1 to 3.

E. K. Merren of Shreveport, La., member of the Ouachita National Park Foundation, in an address before the Texarkana Kiwanis Club, bitterly denied an implication of the article that trickery had played a part in the handling of the park bill in congress.

"Senators Joe T. Robinson and T. H. Caraway and Congressman Otis Wingo were sponsors of the measure in the two houses of congress," Mr. Merren said. "It certainly cannot be charged these men would resort to trickery."

"Every conceivable argument was advanced against the park bill, and when all failed, opponents then resorted to the charge that the Ouachita area is not of national park calibre, yet they failed to show the standards required in national parks. The bill merely

Search for Son Has Tragic End

Find Body of Boy Dead
In Memphis Hotel
Room.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 28.—(AP)—A father's search for his son, missing since Monday night, ended here last night with the finding of the body of Edwin T. Shepperd, Jr., in a hotel room.

An empty vial bearing a poison label and a box which had contained a sleep producing drug were found in the room. Police said he had probably been dead six to seven hours.

The father's search for the boy carried him to the hotel where he recognized his son's writing on the register. The bolted door of the room was forced open to find the boy dead. Two ink splashed notes, one addressed to "Mother" and one to "Dad" both begged forgiveness.

Largest Aircraft At National Air Meet In Cleveland

Los Angeles and Graf Zeppelin Hold Interest of Spectators.

ZEPPELIN SALUTES

Interest Centers Around
Two of World's Largest Machines.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 28.—(AP)— Heading straight for Chicago after passing over Kansas City the giant dirigible Graf Zeppelin at noon was nearing the Mississippi river.

Headwinds had prevented the big ship from equaling the speed she made crossing the Pacific, but the 40 to 50 hour speed she had maintained across the Sierras and Guadalupe mountains had increased to 60 as she sped on over Oklahoma and Kansas.

Dr. Eckener at one time last night indicated he would change his course to go over Little Rock but later made another change, heading northeast from Fort Worth into Oklahoma.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 28.—(AP)—

Thousands of spectators at the national air races turned from the fleet craft of the army, navy and derbyists to watch the skies for the first glimpse of the great dirigibles, the Graf Zeppelin and the Los Angeles whose courses converged above the Cleveland airport.

The Los Angeles, largest in the United States' naval fleet of lighter than air craft, ordered from its base at Lakehurst, arrived here shortly after noon. The Graf Ze-ppelin, battling head winds on the fourth and last lap of its flight around the world, arrived later.

The arrival of the two huge craft broke into the schedule of races for the day, those events being the arrival of two cross-country derby contingents, close course contests, glider contests, sham battle by the army and navy squadrons and the national parachute jumping contest.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 28.— (AP)—The personnel of the naval air station prepared today for the reception of the round-the-world dirigible, the Graf Zeppelin, which is expected to arrive early Thursday.

The ground crew of 300 bluejackets and marines, augmented by 50 sailors from the Philadelphia navy yard, under command of Lieutenant Peck, station mooring officer, are ready to take the ship's spider lines and make her fast to the mooring mast.

Lindy Appears As Naval Stunt Flier

"Gesture of Good Sportsmanship" Minister Declares.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 28.—
An "added attraction" was offered spectators at the national air races Tuesday with Colonel Charles A.
Lindbergh appearing in a leading role as stunt flier.

Colonel Lindbergh and two fliers from the "High Hat" naval squadron agreed to put on an exhibition of aerial acrobatics as a flying unit, going through regulation combat maneuvers over the airport.
Lieutenant E. N. Kivette and Lieutenant Frank O'Brien were the navy experts assigned to join the colonel.

Montgomery Ward Man- ager Back In This City

A. S. Sheffer, who came to Hope in July to assume management of Montgomery Ward's new store and was forced to take a vacation week recovering from an attack of illness, returned today from Hot Springs where he went for treatment, ready to get back on the job.
Mr. Sheffer is greatly improved in health as a result of his stay at the Spa and thinks he will be as good as new in a short time.

Defends Record
Of Robert E. Lee

"You can't compare the record of The Bogie from New Orleans to St. Louis with that of the Robert E. Lee. The Bogie is a motor launch, the Robert E. Lee is a steamboat!" So says C. J.
South, above, 80-year-old Kokomo, Ind., machinist, who is believed to be the only surviving member of the crew that launched the Robert E. Lee when it was built at New Albany, Ind., in 1867.

Straw Vote Close On Early Returns

First Tabulation Indecisive—All Readers Are Asked To Vote.

First returns in The Star's straw vote on Sunday amusements in Hope show a favorable majority of better than three to one, but with opposition developing which makes the poll indecisive at present.

Similar straw votes which showed ultimate victories for Sunday entertainment in Pine Bluff and El Dorado, started off very much stronger than in Hope in Pine Bluff the majority was 10 to 1, and in El Dorado 40 to 1.
The first count in the local vote, which was made this morning, showed 15 for Sunday amusements and 4 against. The same ratio was maintained in the vote for and against an amendment to the state law.

Employees of The Star are prohibited from voting and all duplicates and voting qualifications will be checked before the final count in an effort to make the ballot a truly accurate statement of local sentiment.

Two tabulations will be made —the first being the result inside the city, and the other the vote in the territory reached by The Star.

All readers of The Star are asked to fill in and sign the ballot at the bottom of this page and mail or bring it to The Star office, 217 South Main street,

The Graf Zeppelin Passes Up Hope Not Knowing What She's Missing

Southwest Arkansas woke up this morning, yawning, stretched and rubbed its eyes—and got up to gaze at the sky to see if the Graf Zeppelin was in sight. Disappointed, they returned to their several apartments, shed pajamas, donned workday attire and set out again on the job of raising the world's largest watermelons.

Morning papers had spread the tidings that the silver air queen would pass over this section enroute from Fort Worth to Little Rock, and it wasn't until 10 o'clock it was learned Dr. Eckener had altered his course again and was heading over Oklahoma and Kansas toward his destination.
Only recognition of the fact that Dr. Eckener would not care to alter his program by landing at any intermediate point kept the local Legion post from securing a landing of the Zeppelin here, so confident are they at an offer of a few of these Hope 100-pound melons would have turned the trick.
For not only would one of these same melons make a queen of the air abdicator her throne of honesty to a political party long regarded as swayed with crude oil.
So the Graf passed up bounteous Arkansas for the doubtful pleasure of viewing impeaching Oklahoma and grass-hopping Kansas from the air—the best way to look at 'em, anyhow! And another thought intrudes itself right here, which may account for the air liner taking a different course: She isn't large enough to carry many of these Hope melons, at that.

The Star's Platform

City

Apply the revenues of the municipal power plant to develop the industrial and social resources of Hope.
More city pavement in 1929, and improved sanitary conditions in the alleys and business back-yards.
Support the Chamber of Commerce.

County

A county highway program providing for the construction of a minimum amount of all-weather road each year, to gradually reduce the dirt road mileage.
Political and economic support for every scientific agricultural program which offers practical benefits to Hempstead county's greatest industry.

Encourage farmer organizations, believing that co-operative effort is as practical in the country as it is in town.

State

Continued progress on the state highway program.
Fearless tax reform, and a more efficient government through the budget system of expenditures.
Free Arkansas from the cattle tick.

Every City Needs One

THE voyage of the Graf Zeppelin, the National Air Races at Cleveland, and the daily story of municipal airport improvements in every state in America, draw attention to the fact that here is a new mode of travel to which wise cities will pay tribute.

Every city needs an airport. There is no cause to spend thousands of dollars on installations in the smaller communities, but each city should have an airport as definite and permanent as its railroad station. It should be moderately improved, with landing lights and hangars, representing, as it does, the city's sole connection with the vast new development that aviation is bringing to America this year.

The Star, which is a staunch advocate of the principle that the city-owned power plant should earn a profit, and that profit should be spent in municipal improvements, believes that all progressive citizens would include an airport among the things necessary for the future of the community. But the airport alone would not be a large item. It might be advantageously combined in a general bond issue for two or three other improvements which are badly needed, such as a city-and-county hospital, and a public natatorium.

To make the bond issue readily marketable it would probably be necessary to direct it against the assessed property of Hope; but it could be understood that property would never be taxed so long as the profits of the power plant were able to meet the charge. The state is building its new toll bridges in that fashion—so long as the tolls are adequate there is no drain on the tax resources of the state.

One thing more should be said about public improvements such as these. Sometimes the cost of maintenance is more to be feared than the construction cost. A good way to eliminate this is for the cities to do just what the state is doing—demand a fair charge for service performed. If the state can build bridges and make those who use them pay for the cost, then a city, once it has provided public improvements, is entitled to ask the public to help pay for them.

We do not pretend that an airport would at this time be a profitable investment for the City of Hope, but it would be a wise move for the future; and municipal swimming pool could be made to pay for itself right from the start. A consolidated bond issue covering these items would prove to the world that Hope is following the path already blazed by enterprising and far-visioned municipalities.

Square With the World?

WHEN we stop to think—we smile at the fellow who, at one time or another, gets all his bills cleared up, and loudly proclaims that he is square with the world.

Financially—yes!

But it isn't the financial side of life that clears up, or squares up the biggest debt a man contracts; the debt he owes his parents.

Strange world this! That particular debt is not one of his own acquiring. It is handed to him on a gold platter—or in a baby crib, if you prefer.

It starts piling up the moment he takes his first breath.

And it grows, and grows and grows.
As the years roll by—and often too many years—he begins to realize that other people give up a great deal that he may have a great deal more. He sees that sacrifices are made that he may live on the brighter side of life's winding roadway.

And he keeps on growing—older and older—until he reaches the time when he is on his own—the time when he slips into debt, and then finds his way out—to proclaim—I am square with the world.

Square? Think it over!

He will always owe a debt of gratefulness—appreciation—thoughtfulness. And with interest at the rate of all the kindness a man can show.

A Good Story Gone Long

THE Sherman Democrat takes the position that no bigger demonstration of the usefulness of a college education has been pulled off in America than Bishop Cannon's fifteen thousand word reply to charges that have been going around because of the good bishop's deals in stocks in a bucket shop recently deceased by the bankruptcy route. It takes, according to the Democrat's idea, a smart and well educated man to write fifteen thousand words on any subject.—Clarksville (Texas) Times.

The "Heel of Achilles"

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—One of the most interesting things your correspondent finds to do here this summer is to watch that amiable, astute and altogether able gentleman, Mr. Henry Lewis Stimson, the secretary of state.

Perhaps a reason why this rather cagey gentleman is so pleasant to contemplate in action is that he presents such a contrast to his immediate predecessor, Mr. Kellogg used to get all fussed and mixed up and he was irritable rather than amiable. Nothing ever fuses Mr. Stimson. When Mr. Stimson tells a fib in the interests of our foreign policies he can be expected to stick to it instead of concealing four or five more just to bolster it up.

Anyone who frequently visits both the White House and State Department feels an altogether new atmosphere in the administration of our foreign affairs. For there's Mr. Hoover in one place, who knows what he wants and isn't afraid to order it done, and there's Mr. Stimson in the other place, who knows how to do things and do them well.

Often Rides Horseback
Mr. Stimson is some 61 years old, ten years or so younger than Kellogg. His slightly graying hair is parted on the side and he lets the big end of it flutter aimlessly down on his forehead. Ordinarily he wears a polka dot bow tie of blue, with white dots about the size of carefully sifted peas. Rims of spectacles he wears, with gold temples, and a medium-sized mustache. Generally he appears, in such weather at this, in a gray mohair suit, which has no vest. Every so often the suit appears recently to have been pressed. He looks and talks much like somebody's old Uncle Robert.

Stimson often rides horseback. In Washington he rides every day when he doesn't tennis or golf, instead. Also, on occasion, he shoots, fishes or climbs mountains. In tennis he nearly always plays doubles, for he isn't as young as he was, despite his excellent health. The other doubles players usually include Dr. Joel T. Boone, the White House physician, and Dr. Leo S. Rowe of the Pan-American Union, and they play on the White House courts. While governor-general of the Philippines, Stimson enjoyed deep-sea fishing; recently he spent a trout-fishing week-end in the Adirondacks.

Reads "Heavy Stuff"

He reads biographies and "heavy stuff," with which it is good for a secretary of state to be familiar. Lately he has been reading also the R. M. Irish hunting stories by Mrs. Moss. One of his favorite books is "The Old Soak's History of the World" by Don Marquis.

But he works hard. He has been trying to read everything that goes on in his department. That impossible, but he makes a good job of it. It's a rare day when anyone brings up a subject at a Stimson press conference on which the secretary isn't informed. The way he handles himself at these conferences is one of the best exhibitions of his kind ever given in Washington—he is extraordinarily urbane. No one is likely ever to put anything over on him, one fears. He is seldom at a loss for a snappy comeback.

Often he takes his work home at night to the Warman Park hotel. He also takes it with him on his long trips to his Long Island home every two or three weeks and is to be seen studying it on the train going and coming.

We bargain with life for a penny. And life will pay no more. However we beg at evening. When we count our scanty score. We work for a mental's hire. Only to learn dismayed. That any wage we had asked of life. Life would have paid. For life is just employer; He gives us what we ask. But once we have set the wages. Why, we must bear the task. —Selected.

Mrs. A. K. Holloway was hostess to the members of the Tuesday bridge club yesterday afternoon at her home on South Pine street. Mid-summer flowers brightened the rooms, which were arranged for two tables. Guests other than the club members were Mrs. E. M. McWilliams and Mrs. Frank Trimble. High score prizes went to Mrs. Ernest Wingfield and Mrs. E. M. McWilliams. The hostess served a delightful ice course with cake.

The following announcement received this morning will come as a surprise to the many friends of the bride and groom in this city. "Mr. and Mrs. Leonard W. Young announce the marriage of their daughter, Marguerite Taylor, to Mr. Lawrence Clifford Byers on Saturday, August 24, 1929, Shreveport, La." The wedding was solemnized Saturday morning at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist church parsonage in Shreveport, with Dr. Brooks officiating. The bride was very lovely in her wedding gown, an imported ensemble of royal blue tulle, with beige trimmings and accessories. Her going away gown was an autumn model of brown crepe, with matching hat, gloves and purse. After a short wedding trip to Houston, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. Byers will be at home in ALpine, Texas. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Young, of this city. She was a student in Galloway college, and attended business college in Shreveport, where she has held a very responsible position for the past two years. The groom is the son of Judge and Mrs. R. L. The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY © 1929 BY NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly Burnham writes plays and books, and is generally adored. In a single evening, two men ask her to marry them. One of them, Red Flynn, is a reporter. Molly and Red have been friends for years, but Red has an invalid mother, and he has never been able to contemplate marriage. The other man is Bob Newton, the widower of an old friend, whose little girl Molly adores. Bob reminds her that if she marries him, she will become little Rita's mother. If she refuses, he will take the child and go away.

Bob has been drinking, and is rather abusive, when he finds Red in Molly's apartment late at night. Then, in front of Bob, Red (whose mother has died that very night) asks Molly to marry him. Shortly, Bob flings angrily out of the flat, and Red and Molly sit together and talk of love. She tells him that he would make a perfectly impossible husband. And, besides, she loves Jack Wells. While they are talking, Bob returns with a policeman.

Now Go On With the Story CHAPTER XLIII

The policeman was Bib Tim Duggan, the night patrolman. Molly and he were old friends, but now he greeted her differently.

"Why, Tim?" she exclaimed. "What under the sun is the matter?"

He designated Bob with a jerk of his huge, grizzled head.

"The gentleman says you're keeping his daughter against his will, Miss Burnham."

"Bob Newton, are you crazy?" She wheeled furiously on him. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself. What's the matter with you anyway?"

But Bob preserved a frozen silence. Red was scowling menacingly, and Molly saw that his fists were clenched. She laid her hand on his arm.

"You keep out of this, Red," she ordered. Then she spoke again to Officer Duggan.

"It's quite true, Tim, that I have Mr. Newton's little girl here. You know Rita. Mr. Newton is her father. When Mrs. Newton died, she asked me to take her baby. Mr. Newton surrendered her of his own volition. I've had her ever since. I've never tried to keep her away from him. It isn't true that I have her against his will. He has been coming here whenever he chooses, to see the child and to be my guest. Our relations have always been perfectly friendly."

The big policeman scratched his head. "It's none of my doings, Miss. The gentleman says you've his child, and he comes to the station house looking for a warrant. Seeing as I knew you, I comes, friendly-like, to see what the trouble it."

"Newton's crazy," injected Red. "That's all the trouble, Tim."

"I told you to keep out of this," repeated Molly sternly. She ignored Bob, who stood in the doorway, twisting his hat awkwardly.

"What if I refuse to give her up, Tim?"

"You'd have to show good reason. There'd be a hearing before a judge, and you'd both have a chance to tell your stories."

"But I mean tonight. You're not asking me to wake the poor child at this time of night, and give her to Mr. Newton, to take God-knows-where. It's the most idiotic thing I ever heard!"

"I would be much more sensible now if you two could get together," suggested Duggan peaceably, "and argue it out between the two of you. There's nothing to be gained by running to the judge with your tale. Sure, and the child is his."

"She's mine," contradicted Molly. "He gave her to me."

"To be having for a little while," soothed Duggan. "And sure you want to keep the little angel, which is only nature, God knows. For she's as pretty a one as ever I saw."

Molly turned her back squarely on Bob.

"Ask him," she directed the policeman, "if I may keep her to-night, and if he will come tomorrow to talk things over."

"You heard her, Mr. Newton. Be a good lad now, and let's have no more talk this night. For Miss Burnham is a fine little lady, and you shouldn't be breaking her poor little heart."

They waited, like actors in a drama, for Bob's answer. Officer Duggan drew his shaggy gray brows together, frowning. Molly bent to a bowl of flowers on the table, twisting their blossoms this way and that. Red's fists were still clenched, and he glared at Bob like an animal that seeks to hypnotize before its springs.

Bob bowed. He was looking at Molly, but she kept her back to him.

"If I have Miss Burnham's promise to see me tomorrow, and conclude the matter at that time," he said.

Molly raised her head, and returned his gaze steadily.

"At three o'clock," she said. Then she spoke to Officer Duggan again, explaining Red's presence.

"Mr. Flynn's mother died tonight, Tim. He came to tell me about it."

"And was she ailing long, the poor woman?" inquired the big policeman sympathetically. "May God have mercy on her soul."

"She'd been sick a long time," Red told him. "She's better off now, Tim."

Bob had stepped quietly into the hall, and now Duggan followed him.

"Good night, Miss Burnham. Sorry to have troubled you. I'll say a bit of a prayer this night for you and the little one."

"Oh, thank you, Tim."

"If you'd use your nightstick now on Newton," suggested Red, "it would be more to the point, Tim."

But Molly closed the door on his blasphemy.

"You go to, Red," she commanded. "It would be just like Bob to skulk around here all night. I'll order the flowers in the morning, and you can reach me by phone if there's anything I can do."

"Will you go to the funeral?" he asked.

"If you want me to," she promised. "Poor dear Red! You came here for sympathy, and bumped into one of the usual farces. I'm awfully sorry."

"Oh, that's all right."

He lit a cigarette casually. "Remember, if there's anything I can do, old dear . . ."

"You mean if I want to get married?" she laughed. "Exactly."

"All right. I'll let you know. Please go now, dear. Bob's probably round the corner somewhere, with his watch in his hand, checking up on your exit."

"Damn Bob!" he exclaimed. "Do you suppose he'd really take Rita away? Or was he just trying to throw a scare into you?"

"I think he was trying to frighten me," she said.

"Well, you get hold of me, if he tries to start anything, honey. I can beat him up, if I can't do anything else. The funeral's day after tomorrow. You won't forget, Molly?"

"How could I forget! I'll have seen Bob before then, and everything will be settled. I'll have good news for you."

"I hope so," he told her. Molly spent the rest of the night in the nursery. Once Rita woke. And, murmuring, "Hanny," stretched out her little hand, for Molly to hold. Molly put on the night light, and feasted her eyes on the child's loveliness. Her cheeks were pink and her mouth was like a crimson rose.

There was a poem in the Fifth Grade reader, when Molly went to school. It was about a baby who said an angel kissed her as she came by.

Molly tried to think how it went, but recollection eluded her tonight. She was very tired, and put her head against the side of Rita's bed. She slept fitfully and dreamed horrible dreams about losing Rita. She was wandering through a great forest, filled with wild animals, looking everywhere for the child. Calling and crying. And stumbling as she ran, praying that nothing had befallen her beloved.

"Hello, mama!"

She woke with a fearful start, dreaming that she had found Rita by an open grave, searching for someone who had died.

The child laughed at her alarm, and threw her little arms about Molly's neck, and kissed her.

"Tell me, dear, who had you rather live with—daddy or me? Had you rather stay in your beautiful big nursery, with all your pretty playthings, and have all your pretty little dresses, and everything you want—or had you rather go and live with daddy, and not have any nursery at all, and—"

The child laughed delightedly. It was a new game they were playing.

"I'd rather live with you 'n' daddy bofo," she cried.

"But if you couldn't have us both, darling?"

"I'd rather live with you!" declared Rita, pointing her little finger. "And I'd rather live with daddy too!"

Molly sighed. "You're a born diplomat, she said."

She spent the morning in the park with Rita, and they had luncheon together in the nursery. Every moment today was a precious jewel.

At three the butler announced Bob.

He was calm and courteous today, with a sort of detached politeness. First he apologized for the unpleasantness of the night before.

"It was a bit melodramatic," she conceded coolly. "Rather like the movies, don't you think?"

"It was the only way I could convince you that I was in earnest," he declared. "I had to show you how much it would mean to you to lose Rita."

"Oh, no, you didn't. I knew quite well. Was that the only reason you staged your charming little act?"

"I wanted you to know that the (continued on page six)

The Unsuspecting Pawn Of a Daring Crook!

Until she was 18, Helen Page was reared in the quiet atmosphere of an exclusive girls' school. Leonard Brent, her guardian, spent money lavishly, buying her expensive frocks in Paris, providing her with every luxury.

Helen became the envy of her classmates. She learned to love her guardian for his kindness. She trusted him implicitly and hoped he would ask her to marry him.

But Leonard Brent wasn't kind. A shrewd and calculating crook, he was only grooming Helen to play a part in his diabolical schemes of fraud.

LEONARD BRENT

Unsuspecting, Helen became Brent's accomplice in an audacious plot to swindle an aged millionaire.

Clever and unscrupulous, Brent wrapped the tentacles of crime about Helen so tightly that, on discovering his deception, she was unable to free herself.

Written by the author of "Rich Girl --- Poor Girl" and "High Flight," the story of Helen Page is a swift-moving romance crammed with adventure.

They're All Hard Jobs

Harry Heilmann, the genial and popular Detroit outfielder, was asked recently which one of the three outfield positions was the hardest to play.

"They're all about the same," he said. "There are exceptions, though, in a park where there is a sun field that is particularly bad."

"The ball players say that right field is the place for a loafer and that they put the worst outfielder in right because he can do the least harm there. Perhaps that's the reason I have been kept in right field for nine years."

Another Tale Exploded

Heilmann also makes the interesting statement that outfielders do not shift on the catcher's signals for certain pitches.

"In this day of the lively ball what use is there to shift around for a fast ball or curve?" he said. "The only thing the outfielder can do is to lay back and trust to fate."

"Of course there are certain batters you can play. We go to the foul line for Ruth and Goslin and move away from it for Gehrig."

Play Them Close

"We play in close for a line drive hitter like Charley Jamieson, Bishop and Durocher. You have to play those fellows short because when they hit, you have to be on it or it will be through you for plenty."

"Ruth is a pull hitter, and so is Goslin. You can figure fairly well how to play them. Gehrig is not a pull hitter. You never can tell where he is going to hit."

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

"Simmons and Fox are straight away hitters, but they hit so hard you can't get them even if you are right in the alley. Two of the toughest batters in our league to handle are Joe Judge and Joe Sewell. You can't guess either one of them. They won't hit a bad ball and when they hit a good one you never know where it's going."

Jimmy Full of Reasons

"Jimmy Foxx surely is a modest, retiring kid, isn't he?" we remarked recently in the presence of some of Connie Mack's players. "Yeh?" one of them answered. "He doesn't think any more of a base hit than his upper row of teeth. When he doesn't get a hit he can think of more reasons than the oldest player in the league."

"Early in the season when he would pop up or strike out he would come back to the bench and make the fellow setting next to Connie move over. And then he would pour words into the old man's ears that if he had been an eighth of an inch closer he would have knocked down the flag pole."

Makes Them Drink Water

"He got such a habit of moving in close to the old man that we arranged a system. Whenever he doesn't get his hit and comes back to the bench the fellow who happens to be sitting next to the old man gets up to take a drink of water and Jimmy moves right into the open spot and explains to the old man why he didn't get a home run."

"Jimmy doesn't say much on the field and he doesn't strut, but he thinks plenty and plenty about those hits."

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Connie Mack pulled a wise crack that was unsuspected in the dignified old fellow. . . . An interviewer asked him what it took to make a pennant-winning team. . . . And without a smile he said: "It takes years, young man." . . . And Joe McCarthy, manager of the Cubs,

HOPE ARKANSAS

... on the floor it's TIME!

... in a cigarette it's TASTE!

"Hit the nail on the head" . . . cut out the frills, give smokers the one thing they want—and sales will take care of themselves.

At least, that's the Chesterfield platform. The one thing smokers want is good taste—and that's the one thing we're interested in giving them—

"TASTE above everything"
